BELIEVES IN SPECULATION.

The Waco Times-Herald, keeper of the constitution, defender of the faith, watchman on the tower, etc., and one of the best edited Democratic papers in Texas, is a firm believer in speculation as a price booster. The Times-Herald believes with the cotton exchanges closed and the speculator in cotton futures eliminated, the cotton grower has lost the only friend that stood between him and the spinner. The Times-Herald calls attention to the wheat market, where speculation is permitted, in comparison to the cotton market, where speculation is limited, as an argument in favor of the speculator as a price booster. The Times-Herald says:

"On the Chicago board of trade on yesterday wheat made a wild advance in price.

"We would not undertake to say, of course, that this advance will be maintained; other factors may enter in and run the price down.

"But we do say that it is only by speculation that sharp advances in prices on worldwide commodities are made.

"The sensational advances in prices on cotton were caused by speculators—by Brown and Sully and Scales and their associates.

"Then took place the most remarkable performance in the history of our country.

"The Southern people, living in the region where the cotton is grown, joined in the hue and cry to put a stop to this gambling in cotton.

"Which cry did prevail, and never since has there been a sensational advance in the price of cotton.

"Here we are exercising ourselves about warehouses for the staple, and we do well.

"But let us not deceive ourselves; cotton prices do not advance in this way.

"Let us face the fact that we have destroyed our chief weapon of defense by our legislation against the speculators.

"Look at wheat, where speculation is allowed.

"Then look at cotton, where speculation is not freely allowed.

"And draw your own conclusion."

Governor Ferguson says he wants a closer relationship between the government of this State and the University of Texas to exist. Is this a retraction of the declaration that some folks have been going hog wild on higher education? Occasionally some brother gets up in the meeting, Governor, to say that U. of T. is already running the government of this State?—Waco Times-Herald.

That institution has within its walls politicians enough to run half a dozen States—and then some.—Houston Post.

And that is one of the reasons the people of Texas are going to overwhelmingly adopt the Sackett resolution separating the A. & M. College from the University. They want the A. & M. College forever freed from politics in order that it may go on conquering and to conquer. That it may fulfill its glorious destiny intended for it by the fathers. That it may give to the youth of Texas that education and training which will liberate the farmers from the shackles that have so long bound them, and which shall bring Texas into her own.

The Bryan Eagle says "to see a farmer drive into town and buy haled hay maketh the stomach sick." If present conditions continue there will be but little nausea from that cause in Carthage hereafter. We haven't heard of a Panola County farmer who isn't raising his own forage.—East Texas Register.

We are pleased to say that according to a late report from the Brazos County farm demonstration agent, the practice is also likely to cease in this county. In his report the agent says the crops of the county are good, the farmers have more feed of all kinds than ever before, and are also well supplied with those things needed for home consumption.

Bryan is torn all to pieces with the great amount of public and private work that is in progress, but you bet it looks good. The streets are blockaded and there are other inconveniences, but we can stand that with good grace when we think of the labor that is being employed, the length of the tin bucket brigade and the size of the Saturday night payrolls. Let the good work go on.

Anticipating the result of the election on the 24th, it's a cinch that the people will decree that A. & M. and U. of T. shall not be hitched together, but that each shall trot in single harness.—East Texas Register.

Brother Carnes fired the first shot in the campaign for separation and the indications now are that he is going to fire the last one. And the beauty of it is, every shot plugs the bull's eye.

Roumania, it is reported, has refused flatfooted the demands of Germany to allow arms and ammunition to pass through Roumania for Turkey. Roumania has been hanging in the balance for some time as to which side of the controversy she would take, and we shall now see what she shall see.

The German Ambassador at Washington suggests that the United States offer its services as mediator to Germany and England in the matter of the control of the seas. Germany would no doubt prefer to have the United States help her out of a hard hole than to have us demand our own rights in the premises.

The submarines, like the aeroplanes, generally get theirs if they play the game long enough. The U-51, one of Germany's finest, and which numbered among its distinguished achievements the scuttling and sinking of the great British battleship Majestic, has itself been consigned to Davy Jones' locker.

From August 1, 1914, to June 30, 1915, there was shipped through the port of New York alone $41,000,000 worth of automobiles and accessories to Europe. Another ill wind caused by the war that is blowing good for somebody.

One week from today and the Sackett resolution, separating the A. & M. College and the State University, will be adopted overwhelmingly by the voters of Texas.

Have you cut your weeds yet? They are getting mighty tough now and the longer the delay the tougher they'll get.

Harry Thaw is free, but his freedom was not free; it came high.

A. & M. College and University Divorcement

Pertinent Reasons Why Resolution 34 Should be Adopted at the Election on July 24th.

HON. TOM WELLS

FAVORS SEPARATION

Hon. Tom Wells of Belts, a prominent citizen of Grayson County, writes a strong letter favoring the separation of the A. & M. College and the University, from which we clip the following:

"Joint resolution No. 34 provides for the complete separation of the A. & M. College from the University and constitutes the former an independent college. It places each of these institutions under its own governing board. It provides for an equitable division of the lands set apart for the University of Texas and its branches. It provides that the College of Industrial Arts for white girls, located at Denton, shall be recognized as an independent college of the first class and given its own governing board, and its domicile permanently fixed at Denton.

"It also removes the inhibition against appropriations by the Legislature for buildings at the University.

This I shall vote for, because I think the A. & M. College should not be a branch of the University, but of equal importance with it, and perhaps will be of more service to the State if given the attention it deserves. This proper attention and fostering care it will never have so long as it lives as a kind of parasite in the shadow of the University. I think it better for both schools to be separate and independent of each other. It should not be forgotten that the industrial school for girls is the only school of the kind in the Southwest and only needs some kindly help to become one of the famous female schools in all the United States."

ADVOCATES SEPARATION OF UNIVERSITY AND A. & M.

Former Lieutenant Governor A. R. Davidson of Cuero, who is a candidate for Congressman in the Ninth District, arrived at the Rice Saturday, having just returned from the intercoastal canal meeting at Galveston.

Mr. Davidson is a member of the board of directors of the A. & M. College, and stated that he was in favor of the proposed amendment to the constitution separating A. & M. from the University of Texas, because he believed in such a separation and the carrying out of the purpose for which it was originally established—development along agricultural and mechanical lines purely.

The Prairie View Normal School for negroes, he believes, should confine its work to those two interests also.

Mr. Davidson is also in favor of increasing the Supreme Court personnel by two members.—Houston Post.

The people of Texas are going to divorce the A. & M. College from the State University, and let the question of alimony be settled later on.—Waxahachie Light.

The Times believes that it would be best for the people of Texas and for both institutions that the University of Texas and the A. & M. College be completely separated. Let each be entirely independent of the other and let there be a fair division of the proceeds of the land held by the State for their common benefit. One of the amendments submitted for popular approval or disapproval on July 24 provides for such separation. All parties, factions and organizations seem to favor the amendment, and if the people of Texas understand its import we believe that it will carry by a tremendous majority.—Roscoe Times.

The proposed constitutional amendment separating the State University and the A. & M. College, which is to be voted upon July 24, should be adopted, the Leader believes. There has been friction and jealousy between these institutions, and they should be completely divorced.—Van Alstyne Leader.

SENATOR McNEALUS

FAVORS AMENDMENT

As to the amendment to divorce the A. & M. College from the University, Senator J. C. McNealus says: "The strained relations that have existed for many years between the

A. & M. College and the University are becoming year by year more acute. If left as they now are this unfavorable condition will increase, instead of diminish. My candid opinion is that the salvation of the two schools depends upon divorcement."
